

Titanic Survival Analysis

Amount of people who survived in each sex

The class-based survival pattern

Women were far more likely to survive than men — 74.2% of women survived, compared to just 18.9% of men. First-class passengers also had a notably higher survival rate than those in third class, reflecting both the "women and children first" evacuation approach and the closer proximity of first-class cabins to lifeboats.